Dear Richard:

Swaffham Buttercross

Whilst looking at the Buttercross today with respect to the lack of access to a mains electricity point, I noticed that a pigeon was making him or herself very comfortable on one of the columns.

Could I suggest that in order to deter roosting pigeons or doves and the inevitable mess they would make the council look at the possibility of putting netting of some sort at the top of each column to deter birds roosting there.

Yours sincerely,

Ian Clews
